Keeping Washington a Great Place to Live, Work, and Play

Washington is blessed with an abundance of rich, natural lands that provide jobs, attract tourists, and give residents places to recreate and rejuvenate.

Outdoor recreation in Washington accounts for nearly 4 percent of gross state product, according to the Outdoor Industry Foundation. The foundation reports that outdoor recreation:

- Contributes more than $11.7 billion annually to Washington’s economy.
- Supports 115,000 jobs across the state.
- Generates $650 million in annual state tax revenue.
- Produces $8.5 billion annually in retail sales and services.

In addition, conserving parks and other natural areas provides vital habitat for wildlife, increases property values, and ensures that Washington remains a great state to live.

One-Stop Shopping for State Investments

With so much at stake, the Recreation and Conservation Funding Board ensures that only the best projects receive funding. The board administers nearly a dozen state and federal grant programs that fund a variety of organizations to build parks, trails, ball fields, firearm and archery ranges, and boating facilities; conserve and restore wildlife habitat; and preserve farmland. The board sets the criteria and ensures projects meet state, local, or national priorities for outdoor recreation and conservation. Consider:

- The board’s grants are the largest source of funding for most city and county park departments’ capital projects (outside of local levies).
- The board is a significant financial contributor to conserving some of the state’s most pristine natural areas for plants and animals at risk of extinction.
- The board offers the only state grants for protecting important farmland from being converted by development.
Involving Citizens

All of the board’s grant processes are open and competitive. Generally, grant applications are accepted in even-numbered years. The grant proposals first are reviewed by panels of volunteers, experts, and staff. The panels weigh the merits of the proposals against established grant program criteria, strategic plans, and in some cases, national priorities. They compile ranked lists of projects that the board considers for funding. In some cases, the board makes recommendations for funding to the Governor, Legislature, or federal government.

Funding

Funding for the grants comes from federal funds, state gas taxes, fees, and the state’s sale of general obligation bonds.

Grants Awarded

Since 1964, the board has awarded more than $1 billion for more than 5,000 projects in every county of the state.

Grant recipients have contributed more than $735 million, bringing the total investment to more than $1.7 billion in Washington’s great outdoors.

This investment is protected long-term through contracts managed by the Recreation and Conservation Office.

Other Responsibilities

The Recreation and Conservation Funding Board is more than a grant-making agency. In addition, the board has a number of other responsibilities.

For example, the board has created statewide plans for recreation and boating to enable the state to qualify for federal grants.

The board also hosts a statewide Web site for boaters (www.boat.wa.gov)

The board also frequently completes reports and legislative studies on a range of topics including public ownership of lands, recreation trends, and levels of service for park departments.

Asotin County Little League used a $147,000 Youth Athletic Facilities grant to develop baseball fields, parking, and a building housing restrooms, concessions, and a small office space.